SIR HENRY BURDETT K.C.B.

FOR CONSTIPATION, GOUT, RHEUMATISM & OBESITY,

PRESCRIBE

Hunyadi János

THE BEST AND SAFEST NATURAL APERIENT WATER.

CBX. B

HIGHEST REPUTATION

ALL OVER THE WORLD.

"The prototype of all Bitter Waters."—Lancet.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

DOSE.—To relieve constipation the average dose for an adult is from a third to half a tumbler, taken on an empty stomach on rising. To obtain the depurative and tonic effects in dyspepsia, biliousness, congestion of the liver, etc., a quarter of a tumbler should be taken every morning before breakfast.

"Hunyadi János" may be taken pure or mixed with hot or cold water. If hot water be used the temperature should be high enough to make the mixture as hot as can be drunk comfortably. If cold, the water should be at the ordinary temperature, that is to say, not iced or ice-cold.

A draught of pure water, hot or cold, taken immediately after, increases the efficacy of the laxative and obviates any after-taste.

FOR CHILDREN.—The dose is proportional to the age. Between five and ten years of age from one to two teaspoonfuls of the water, which may be mixed with milk, will be sufficient. Above twelve the dose is a quarter of a tumbler, taken as above.

N.B. [illegible] doses are required to produce [illegible]

PREFACE.

THE last edition of Burdett's Official Nursing Directory was published simply as a Directory for the first time, and the more compact form and cheaper price have, we think, been generally appreciated. The Editorial Committee feel, however, that a work of this description, to thoroughly fulfil its mission, should contain not only the names of the Nurses, but also particulars of those Institutions which supply Trained Nurses for private cases. This year, therefore, a classified list of such Institutions has been added, and, in every case where official information has been obtainable, particulars are given of the number of Nurses employed, the length of training required by each Institution, the fees charged for the Nurses' services, and the telegraphic and telephonic addresses.

No one will deny that the publication of a Nursing Directory of a strictly official and neutral character is directly advantageous to the Medical Profession, to Trained Nurses and to the public generally. The importance of having only competent Nurses to tend to the sick is apparent to everybody, and it is only by such a Directory that any adequate protection is afforded against those who, with little or no training, advertise themselves as fit to perform the duties of a Nurse. The appreciation already extended to Burdett's Official Nursing Directory convinces the Editorial Committee that it has fulfilled a real need in the past, and they hope that in its present form the sphere of its usefulness may be greatly extended. In the present, which is the fifth issue, a large number of new names have been added, and the particulars given have been revised and verified with extreme care.

The difficulties which attend the Committee's efforts are numerous, and it is again necessary to emphasise the fact that much trouble is caused by the loose manner in which many Nurses fill in the Application Forms, and from their frequent changes of address, causing a great deal of unnecessary correspondence and loss of time in tracing their whereabouts. This would be obviated if Nurses would make a point of communicating any change of address or additional particulars of their nursing career to the Acting Editor, and by giving, whenever possible, a private address, as well as the address of the Hospital or Institution where they are employed. This would go far to ensure a Nurse receiving a proof for correction, whereas now a large number of letters are returned through the post marked "Gone away," or "Unknown". Again, many Nurses forget to return the proofs sent to them for correction, and, later, are surprised to find that their names have either an asterisk against them, or that the particulars given are incomplete. Some Nurses on receiving a proof and finding that the details given are correct, may think it a matter of small consequence whether the proof is returned or not. It is, however, of the greatest importance that the proof should be sent back immediately, for otherwise an asterisk is placed against the name of the Nurse as an intimation that there is no guarantee that the particulars given are correct to date. The position which the Directory holds as a correct authority could not clearly be maintained if it were taken for granted that the address and particulars given of a Nurse were correct simply because nothing had been heard to the contrary. The return of the forms sent to Nurses who are new to the Directory is small compared with the number of such forms sent out, and this proves how ignorant many Nurses are of the loss which the omission of their names from this Directory may cause to themselves.

This loss has been proved beyond question in the last two years. During the time that the war in South Africa was in progress the particulars of the training and career of those Nurses who went to the seat of war were given, whenever available, in the pages of The Hospital, and the fact that in some cases no particulars were given caused inquiry as to the seeming discrepancy. The fact was that no information concerning them could be obtained. At the time articles were published in The Hospital urging upon Nurses the importance of taking steps to have their names entered in the Directory, and since then the returns have been better, but there is still plenty of room for improvement, and if we reiterate this fact it is only because we are convinced how all-important it is to the Nurses themselves. The difficulties, too, in the way of verification are serious, due in part to the haphazard fashion in which Hospital Registers were formerly kept, to the uncritical way in which some of the returns have been examined, and also to the refusal of some Matrons—happily fewer now in number than formerly—to verify the particulars of training relating to their Nurses. It has been the earnest desire of the Editorial Committee to make the Directory "official" in the sense that the information given in it relating to Nurses is either derived from official sources or has been verified by competent authorities. They regret that in some instances they have not received the help which they looked for, but at the same time they welcome this opportunity of returning their sincere acknowledgments to that numerous body of helpers throughout the Empire—Matrons, Secretaries, Managers of Hospitals and others—without whose cordial approbation and painstaking assistance the present Directory would never have seen the light.

It may be well to repeat that the compilers of the Directory do not claim for it any authority analogous to that possessed by the Medical Register, nor do they believe that the time has yet arrived when a rigid conformity in curriculum and period of training can be forced upon those who desire to place their names upon a Directory of Trained Nurses. What Burdett's Official Nursing Directory does is to state the facts as nearly as they can be ascertained, and the compilers have reserved to themselves the right of excluding any name from the Directory, and of declining to register any particulars with reference to work, training or professional experience which appeared to be insufficiently authenticated or otherwise unsuitable.

Burdett's Official Nursing Directory in its present form contains an opening chapter on the Principal Laws affecting Nurses, by Mr. L. S. Bristowe, and a classified list of the Institutions from which Trained Nurses can be obtained for private cases. For the information of those who did not see the last issue it may be stated that the part which originally formed the first portion of Burdett's Official Nursing Directory is published separately as an official text-book, under the title of The Nursing Profession, and comprises a detailed account of the principal Nurse Training Schools in the United Kingdom, the Colonies and the United States of America. The Directory is published at 3s., and The Nursing Profession at 2s. net, and together they form a reliable guide to the rules and methods of the Training Schools, and to the qualifications and careers of those who are engaged in the calling of a Nurse.

OUTLINE OF THE PRINCIPAL LAWS AFFECTING NURSES.

I.—OUTLINE OF THE PRINCIPAL LAWS AFFECTING NURSES.

An attempt is here made to set forth as clearly and concisely as possible an outline of those branches of the law which are most likely to affect nurses in the practice of their profession. There are no laws peculiar to nurses.

Engagement.

The terms on which a nurse is engaged depend on the contract entered into in each case. They of course, always involve the payment to her of certain wages, and the performance by her of certain duties. Where she is engaged by, or on behalf of, a private patient, her duty is confined to nursing the particular case for which she is employed, and she receives her wages directly from the patient or other persons employing her. The case is the same if she enters or avails herself of the services of an institution established for the purpose of bringing nurses into communication with employers. An institution of this kind is merely a nursing agency. It receives a commission or other payment for introducing the nurse to the person who engages her, but the contract of employment is made between the nurse and the patient or his friends direct. The position of a nurse who enters a hospital or nursing home or other similar institution is different. In such a case the nurse usually engages in return for a certain salary, and possibly other advantages, to give her services for the benefit of the institution for either hospital or private nursing as may be required. If she is sent out for private nursing the contract for her services is made by the patient or his friends with, and the remuneration is payable to, the institution, and not her. Where a nurse is employed by an institution of this kind, the duties expected of her are often stated in printed regulations which, together with all the other rules of the institution, she by accepting the engagement binds herself to perform and keep. It need hardly be said that whether a nurse is engaged in private nursing or is in the employment of an institution, the contract which she enters into includes an obligation to nurse the patients entrusted to her with care and diligence, and it must be added (at all events where she professes to be trained) with competent skill.

Period of Engagement and Dismissal.

The period for which a nurse is engaged and the mode in which her engagement may be terminated vary according to circumstances. If she is employed by a hospital or other institution, the term of employment and the mode in which dismissal may take place are usually prescribed by the rules. Thus it frequently happens that the power of dismissal is, by the rules, solely vested in a committee of the governing body; or it may be entrusted to the matron or lady superintendent, with or without a right of appeal to a committee of the governors. In such a case a nurse can only be validly dismissed in the prescribed manner, and by the prescribed authority. In other cases a special arrangement may be made with the nurse as to the term for which she is employed, and as to the notice (if any) required for her discharge. In default of any other circumstances by which these questions can be determined, regard must be had to the interval at which the wages are paid. If they are paid weekly then, in the absence of anything to the contrary, the engagement is from week to week, and a week's notice of dismissal is required. If they are paid monthly or at any other interval, then similarly the engagement is by the month or otherwise, as the case may be, and a corresponding notice is required for dismissal. And in any case the employment may be immediately terminated by payment of a week's or month's wages (or as the case may be) in lieu of notice.

If the employment, instead of being from week to week or from month to month, is for an ascertained period, it expires with the termination of that period, and no notice of dismissal or wages in lieu of notice need be given.

It is conceived that the rule of custom, applicable in the case of menial servants, that a month's notice is required to terminate the engagement on either side, has no application to a sick nurse.

Apart from any contract as to the circumstances under which dismissal may take place, the engagement of a nurse may at any time be summarily determined for misconduct without notice or wages in lieu of notice. Thus wilful disobedience or gross insolence, habitual neglect of duties and great incapacity, together with more serious offences, are grounds for instant dismissal and forfeiture of wages.

Action for Wrongful Dismissal.

A nurse who is wrongfully dismissed can maintain an immediate action for damages, the measure of damage being the loss which, in the opinion of a jury, she has actually sustained. Wrongful dismissal means dismissal otherwise than in accordance with the contract which was entered into. If, therefore, the nurse was hired by the week, and she receives a week's notice of discharge or a week's wages in lieu of such notice, no action is maintainable by her whatever the reason for the discharge may have been, for the engagement was from week to week and has been duly determined. But if she is dismissed at a moment's notice, without sufficient cause and without wages in lieu of notice, the action will lie, for her dismissal has been improper, and her employer has broken the contract which he made with her. In rare cases an improper dismissal may be restrained by injunction, but this remedy is seldom appropriate.

Recovery of Wages.

If the nurse's wages are not duly paid an action will lie for the recovery of them. Where the amount claimed is less than £50 the action may be brought in the County Court, but in other cases it must be in the High Court. In the case of a nurse engaged in private nursing, the person to be sued is, of course, the person who employs her. In the case of a nurse employed by an institution, the institution itself cannot be sued unless it is (as is the case with many hospitals) a corporate body; but the person who actually entered into the contract of engagement with the nurse, although such person may be merely a matron or lady superintendent or other official, is, as a rule, personally liable to pay her salary. And if the contract was entered into by, or under the direction of, a committee, then every member of the committee who attended the meeting at which the contract was entered into or authorised is primâ facie liable upon it. It may, however, be one of the terms on which a nurse is employed that she shall look for payment only to the funds of the institution. If this is so, no action for wages can be brought against the official or the members of the committee who engaged her.

Treatment of Patients.

The liability of a nurse in respect of bodily injury to a patient improperly committed is the same as that of any other person would be. If the injury was wilful, that is, if there was an intention to injure, she may be prosecuted criminally. And whether the injury has been committed wilfully or not, she may be rendered liable in a civil action for damages.

She may also be responsible in damages for an injury resulting to a patient from gross negligence, for there is an obligation upon a nurse to be careful in the discharge of her duties. And if the negligence was wilful, that is, if the nurse was conscious that she had not taken proper and ordinary care, and that she was incurring the risk of causing harm to the patient, she might also be liable to a criminal prosecution, of course involving punishment proportionate to the gravity of the offence. An example will render this clear. Let it be supposed that a doctor orders a patient a warm bath, and the nurse whose duty it is to carry out the order makes the bath so hot that the patient is scalded. Here there are three possible alternatives. The nurse may have intended to scald the patient; or she may have placed the patient in the bath although she knew that she had not ascertained whether the water was at the proper temperature; or she may without any wrong intention have placed the patient in the bath carelessly and without thought. In the first case there is present an intention to injure the patient, and the act is consequently criminal. In the second case there is conscious negligence, and the act is again criminal. In the third case there is simple carelessness, and the liability involved is in damages only. Again, let it be supposed that the doctor has ordered a particular medicine, and the nurse administers another which causes injury to the patient. The three alternatives are again possible. The wrong medicine may have been wilfully administered, in which case there is criminal liability. Or it may have been given with conscious ignorance on the part of the nurse whether it was the right medicine or not, in which case there is wilful negligence, and again criminal liability is involved. On the other hand it may have been given thoughtlessly but without any intention to injure or even to be negligent. In this case the liability is in damages alone. Where damages can be recovered, and the patient dies, they may be recovered for the benefit of his or her wife, husband, parent or child.

A Nurse not a Doctor.

It is perhaps hardly necessary to point out that a nurse is not a doctor. Her position is subservient to that of the doctor. She is there to carry out his orders; but she is not entitled to prescribe for the patient herself, or to decide what method of treatment is proper for the disease from which the patient is suffering. There is no law which can prevent any person, even a nurse, from prescribing for a patient if desired to do so. But to discharge a function of this kind without possessing the requisite skill and knowledge, which only a medical training can give, is to tread on dangerous ground. Any person who deals with the life or health of any of his Majesty's subjects is bound to have proper skill and knowledge, and if a patient dies for want of it, such person is guilty of manslaughter. Similarly, if the patient is injured without dying, there is a corresponding liability, and, in any case, the person who presumes to prescribe without possessing competent knowledge, may be liable to an action for damages.

Contributory Negligence.

Damages are not recoverable where there has been what is technically called "contributory negligence" on the part of the patient himself. Thus, if (although there may have been negligence on the part of the nurse) the injury is the immediate result, not of that negligence, but of negligence on the part of the patient, or if the patient has by his own carelessness directly contributed to the injury, he is precluded from recovering damages.

Abortion.

Any attempt by drug or instrument to procure a miscarriage, whether the woman is actually with child or not, is a felony and heavily punishable. And it is a misdemeanour, also involving liability to serious punishment, to supply or procure a drug or instrument, knowing that it is intended to be used for such a purpose.

Gifts from Patients.

A gift obtained from a patient by undue influence is liable to be set aside, whether it consists of a bequest by will or of a gift during life. In the case of a gift by will the burden of proving undue influence rests upon those who allege it. In the case of a gift during life the rule is more strict. Where a doctor obtains a benefit from his patient during life, there is a presumption of law that it was obtained by undue influence, and it will be set aside unless it can be proved that it was the voluntary act of the patient. The ground of this rule is that a doctor stands towards his patient in a position which enables him to exercise great influence over him. It is conceived that in a less degree a similar position is occupied by a sick nurse, and that a considerable benefit obtained by her from a patient would be presumed (unless the contrary was clearly proved) to have been obtained by an improper use of the influence which her relationship with the patient placed her in a position to exercise.

This does not, of course, apply to small gifts, bestowed as tokens of friendship or gratitude.

In the case of a hospital nurse, the rules of the hospital generally preclude the acceptance of any gift from a patient.

Defamation of Character.

Verbal defamation is called slander, and written defamation is called libel. Either may be made the subject of a civil action for damages, provided the statement alleged to be slanderous or libellous is false and disparaging, and is published maliciously.

Publication is not confined to making known to the public, but includes making known to any person other than the person against whom the libel or slander is directed. Malice is presumed in every case where the slander or libel was not published on a privileged occasion. Where the communication is privileged no action will lie, unless express malice is proved.

In the case of a slander, though not in the case of a libel, special damage must be proved, otherwise the action will not succeed. This rule is, however, subject to important exceptions. A slander falsely imputing to a person the commission of a criminal offence, or misconduct in, or want of some necessary qualification for his or her profession, is actionable per se without the necessity of proving special damage, for in such a case the law presumes that the person against whom the slander is directed has suffered damage.

A person who repeats a libel or slander is equally liable with the person who originated it.

A character of a nurse, as, indeed, of any other person seeking employment, given bonâ fide to a person requesting it is privileged, and therefore not actionable unless express malice can be proved.

Nurses as Witnesses.

No person is bound to attend as a witness at a trial, unless duly served with a subpœna for that purpose. If subpœnas for different cases are served for the same time, a criminal prosecution takes precedence over a civil action. In all other cases the subpœna first served should be the one complied with.

Giving Evidence.

It is by no means easy to give evidence properly. There are, however, a few elementary rules, the careful observance of which is of the utmost importance. The duty of a nurse called as a witness (as indeed of every witness except a professional witness who may be called upon to express an opinion) is to confine her evidence to facts within her own personal knowledge. She is not, as a rule, expected or entitled to express an opinion, and she should be most careful to avoid stating as facts things which are known to her only by hearsay, or which are merely matters of inference. The facts which she does know, she should state simply, without exaggeration on the one hand, and without any attempt at concealment on the other. She is there to give information to the court, and she is not responsible for, and must not take into consideration the consequences which may ensue. It is perhaps superfluous to say that if facts are to be clearly stated they must be clearly arranged in the mind of the witness. This will often require careful thought, which should of course be bestowed in advance ; and it will be found of material advantage in any case in which there is a probability of being called as a witness to make notes of the circumstances at or shortly after the time at which they occurred.

The demeanour of a witness should be quiet and respectful. The questions addressed to her should be answered as shortly and simply as possible, and she should be careful, especially in cross-examination, not to be led away from the facts which she knows, and which alone she is competent to state. Any attempt to return smart or frivolous answers should be studiously avoided.

Expenses.

In the case of a civil action a nurse like every other witness is entitled to be paid a sum sufficient to cover the reasonable expenses of attending the court. And she cannot be compelled to give evidence until this has been done. The objection that her expenses have not been paid cannot, however, be raised after the witness has been sworn. A nurse summoned as a witness in an action in the High Court cannot claim compensation for loss of time, but in very exceptional cases a payment of this kind may be allowed. In the County Courts a different rule prevails. Every witness in a County Court is not only entitled to the reasonable expenses of coming to, staying at and returning from the place of trial, but also to an allowance for loss of time. The allowance in the case of a female varies from 2s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. per day.

In criminal proceedings there is no obligation to tender a witness her expenses unless she is required to come from one distinct part of the United Kingdom to another. In such last-mentioned case, however, she cannot be compelled to obey the subpœna unless she was at the time of service tendered a sum sufficient to cover the reasonable expenses of coming and returning.

The costs of the attendance of witnesses at an inquest are usually provided for by the local authority, and paid by the coroner.

In the case of a summary conviction no tender of expenses is required, and it is in the discretion of the magistrates whether costs will be allowed or not.

Infectious Diseases.

A penalty not exceeding £5 is imposed on any one suffering from an infectious disease of any of the kinds requiring notification (see post) who exposes himself, or on any one in charge of such a person who exposes him, without proper precautions against spreading the infection, in any street, public place, shop, or inn; and also on any one who gives, sells, removes, or exposes any bedding, clothing, or other articles which have been exposed to infection.

A penalty of the same amount, with a further penalty in case the offence continues of £2 for every day during which it continues, is also imposed on any person who throws or permits to be thrown infected rubbish into an ash-pit or other receptacle for refuse without disinfecting them. Outside the metropolis, however, this only applies in districts in which the Infectious Diseases (Prevention) Act, 1890, has been adopted.

Disinfecting.

In London places for the disinfection of articles infected by any diseases requiring notification, together with the means of removal, must be provided by the sanitary authorities, and they may be provided for articles infected by any disease. In country districts places for disinfection may similarly be provided, but it is not compulsory.

Conveyance of Infected Persons.

In London the conveyance of an infected person in a public conveyance is absolutely prohibited. The driver of the conveyance (if he knows that he is conveying an infected person), the person who placed him in the conveyance, and the infected person himself are each of them liable to a penalty not exceeding £10; and the driver may also recover from the infected person and from the person who caused him to be conveyed, the cost of disinfecting the conveyance.

Outside the metropolitan area a penalty of £5 is imposed on a person suffering from an infectious disease who exposes himself in a public conveyance, without taking proper precautions against spreading the infection, or who enters a public conveyance without notifying to the owner, conductor, or driver that he is suffering from such disease, and any person in charge of the infected person who so exposes him is liable to the like penalty. An infected person who enters a conveyance contrary to these rules is also liable to pay the expense of disinfecting it.

A conveyance and attendants for the removal of an infectious patient can always be obtained from the Metropolitan Asylums Board.

Notification.

In London a case of infectious disease occurring in a house, which includes a school or any factory or building in which persons are employed, always requires to be notified to the medical officer of health of the district. Outside London similar notification is required in districts in which the Infectious Diseases (Notification) Act, 1889, has been adopted by the sanitary authority.

The duty of giving the notice does not usually fall upon the nurse, but it may do so. It is imposed in the first instance on the head of the family to which the patient belongs, and, in default of him, on the nearest relatives of the patient present in the house or in attendance on the patient. In default of any of these the duty is cast on every person in charge of, or in attendance on, the patient, which would, of course, include the nurse. In the last resort it falls upon the person having the charge, management, and control of the building.

A penalty of 40s. is imposed on omission to send the notice, but a person (such as a nurse) who is only required to send it in default of some other person, is not punishable if she can satisfy the court that she had reasonable cause to believe that the notice had been sent by some other person.

The notice may be sent to the medical officer of health at either his office or his residence.

Diseases requiring Notification.

The diseases requiring notification are small-pox, cholera, diphtheria, membranous croup, erysipelas, scarlatina or scarlet fever, and all fevers known as typhus, typhoid, enteric, relapsing, continued, or puerperal. And the sanitary authority of the district may enlarge the list.

Registration of Births and Deaths.

Cases may arise (although this is not usually the case) in which the duty of registering a birth or death may fall upon the nurse.

Births.

In the case of a birth the duty of registration is imposed in the first place on the father and mother, and in default of them upon the occupier of the house in which to the knowledge of such occupier the child was born, and upon each person present at the birth, and upon the person having charge of the child, which may, of course, include a nurse. The duty comprises giving information to the registrar of births and deaths for the sub-district in which the birth took place within forty-two days thereafter (not including the day of birth) of the date and place of birth, the name (if any) and sex of the child, the name and rank or profession of the father, the name and maiden surname of the mother, and the signature description and residence of the informant.

If the birth is not registered within the above period, the registrar may by notice in writing require any of the persons above mentioned to attend personally within such time (not less that seven days after the receipt of the notice, and not more than three months after the birth) as he may specify, to give the required information and to sign the register.

If the registration has not taken place within three months, the registrar may before the expiration of twelve months from the birth, by notice in writing, require any of the same persons to make a declaration before the superintendent registrar of the particulars required for registration and to sign the register.

After twelve months a birth cannot be registered without the written authority of the Registrar-General.

The name of the father of an illegitimate child cannot be entered on the register except at the joint request of himself and the mother. The birth of a still-born child is of course not registered.

Deaths.

The duty of registering a death falls (where an inquest is held) upon the coroner. In other cases it devolves in the first place upon the nearest relatives of the deceased present at his death or in attendance during his last illness, and in default of them upon every other relative of the deceased dwelling or being in the same sub-district and, in default of them, upon each person present at the death, and the occupier of the house in which to his knowledge the death took place. In default of any of these persons the duty falls upon each inmate of the house in which the death took place, and upon the person causing the body to be buried. The information required for registration comprises the date, cause, and place of death, the name, sex, age, and rank or profession of the deceased, and the signature, residence and description of the informant, and such information must be given to the best of the informant's knowledge and belief.

A death is required to be registered within five days, exclusive of the day of death; but if notice of the fact of death accompanied by the death certificate is sent to the registrar, a further period of fourteen days from the death, but exclusive of the day of death, is allowed for the other particulars.

If the death is not registered within this period, the registrar may at any time within twelve months from the death, by notice in writing, require any of the persons above mentioned to attend personally for the purpose of supplying the information required, and to sign the register. After the expiration of twelve months a death cannot be registered without the written authority of the Registrar-General.

The doctor's certificate of death should be handed to one of the persons whose duty it is to register the death, and the person receiving the certificate is bound, under a penalty of 40s., to deliver it to the registrar when giving notice of the death.

A fine of 40s. is imposed on refusal to answer a requisition by the registrar for information, and to wilfully give false information entails liability to severe penalties.

Burial of Still-born Child.

A nurse may in some cases be required to make a declaration for the purpose of enabling a still-born child to be buried. A still-born child cannot be buried unless the person in control of the burial-ground is furnished with (a) the certificate of a registered medical practitioner who was present at the birth, or examined the body, that the child was not born alive; (b) a declaration to the like effect signed by some person who would, if the child had been born alive, have been required to register the birth, and stating that no registered medical practitioner was present at the birth, or that his certificate cannot be obtained; or (c) if there has been an inquest, an order of the coroner. The burial of a deceased child as though it were still-born entails a penalty of £10.

Concealment of Birth.

Any attempt to conceal the birth of a child, whether born alive or not, by secretly disposing of the body, is a criminal offence.

Sinclair and Miss Jane Wilson (by the Lord President of the Council).

The Act provides that:—(1) From 1st April, 1905, any woman, not certified under the Act, who takes and uses the title of midwife shall be liable to a fine not exceeding £5. (2) From 1st April, 1910, no woman may habitually and for gain attend women in child-birth, except under direction of a qualified medical practitioner, unless she is certified under the Act. Any woman so doing is liable to a fine of £10. (3) No woman certified under the Act may employ an uncertified person as her substitute. (4) The certificate under the Act does not confer upon any woman right or title to be registered under the Medical Acts, nor authorise her to grant any medical certificate, or any certificate of death, or of still-birth. (5) Any woman who, within two years of the Act coming into operation, claims to be certified under the Act, will be so certified if she holds a certificate in midwifery from the Royal College of Physicians of Ireland, or from the Obstetrical Society of London, or from the Coombe Lying-in Hospital and Guinness's Dispensary, or the Rotunda Hospital, Dublin, or such other certificate approved by the Central Midwives' Board, or produces evidence satisfactory to the Board, that at the time of the passing of the Act she had been at least one year in bona fide practice as a midwife, and bears a good character.

The Act gives the local control of midwives to the Connty or Board Councils, or to Committees appointed by them, and stipulates that midwives shall notify to the Local Authority their place of practice every 1st of January. The Act comes into operation on the 1st April, 1903.

A Boon to Nurses!

"KING'S PATENT COOKED OATMEAL."

This FINEST SCOTCH OATMEAL is invaluable in Confinement Cases, making a cup of delicious gruel, with One Minute's Boiling, and saving much time and trouble.

It is thoroughly Cooked by a new patent process which, whilst preserving its most nutritious properties, eliminates the too heating qualities contained in ordinary Groats or Oatmeal.

As a diet for Growing Children, Ladies and Invalids, it is unsurpassed, being a sure remedy for Constipation.

Recommended largely by the most eminent Medical Men, and prescribed for daily use in many of the leading Maternity Hospitals.

Prepared under the personal supervision of a Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians.

In 3d., 6d., 1s. and 3s. Tins.
